

Death Penalty, Long Terms Asked at Trial of 34 Greeks

ATHENS, April 8 (Reuters).—The prosecutor at a court-martial here today demanded the death sentence for a university professor and life imprisonment for four other persons charged with plotting to overthrow the army-backed regime and establish a Communist state in Greece.

Maj. Ioannis Liappis made the demand in his summation at the trial of 34 persons charged with using bombs in an attempt to topple the government.

All the defendants, including three women, were alleged to be members of an underground organization known as Demokratiki Amynta (Democratic Defense).

In his six-hour speech, Maj. Liappis described the defendants as "criminals whose motives had no moral principles" and accused them of resorting to uncontrolled violence to impose their will on the majority of the Greek people.

All the accused have pleaded not guilty.

He described Prof. Dionyssios Karageorgas as the leader of the group and demanded the death penalty for him.

"Prof. Karageorgas has proved unworthy of the confidence placed in him by the state and the people. He must be made harmless and must be cut off from society. I therefore demand his physical extermination," Maj. Liappis said.

Quake Jolts Greek Town

ATHENS, April 8 (Reuters).—Panic-stricken residents ran into the streets of Navplion, 60 miles southwest of here, when a strong earth tremor shook the town today. The tremor, felt in Athens, damaged several houses. No casualties were reported.

Prof. George Maghakis, 48, Ioannis Starakis, 35, a Greek-French journalist, Spyridon Loukas, 35, a chemist, and Ioannis Kombotiatis, 34, a clerk.

He also asked for prison terms for Prof. Karageorgas and these four defendants ranging from 20 to 25 years.

The prosecutor asked the five army officers sitting on the court-martial to pass prison terms ranging from two years and two months up to 25 years on 26 other defendants, including George Iordanides, 69, a retired general.

Maj. Liappis described Gen. Iordanides as one of the leaders of Democratic Defense but accepted extenuating circumstances. He demanded an eight-year term for the general.

He requested the acquittal of three defendants.

The court adjourned until tomorrow when the defense counsel is expected to sum up the case for the defendants. A verdict is expected at the weekend.
