

THE WALL STREET

JOURNAL

27.11.87

Greece's economy minister, Kostas Simitis, resigned and said Greece risks losing the benefits of its austerity program. His resignation came after Prime Minister Papandreou advanced the payment of 1988 wage increases to January from May. Simitis was the architect of the austerity program introduced by the socialist government in October 1985.